

Yi Wang is a professor at the Department of Physics, the Chinese University of Hong Kong. Her group works on MD simulations of biomolecules, with a focus on lipid membranes and related systems. Recent studies from her group include the calculation of free energy barriers against drug or drug-like molecules' permeation, modelling of pore-forming toxins, as well as condensates formed via liquid-liquid phase separation and their interactions with membranes.